Mexican Revolution Talked About by a Man

WHO UNDERSTANDS THE THING.

The Wily Revolutionist Skips Around with Such Impunity There Is no Knowing in What Section He Will Turn Up Next.

ON THE RIO, VIA LAREDO, Tex., Jan. 9.—The lack of specific news from Garza creates the impression of a calm before the storm. The wily revolutionist has skipped about with such impunity that there is no knowing where he will turn up next.

It seems to be generally believed that he is backed by the clerical party in Mexico, who are aiming at a partial restoration of church supremacy. This, with the disaffected elements from one class and another who are always ready to grasp a change with the ideas that it cannot be for the worst, gives him a support of no mean proportions.

The fact that he has been able to live and support his band without raids or robbery shows that he is either receiving funds from some source beyond his own revenues or is supported by sympathizers on both sides of the river.

Private letters from Monclova indicate that the towns surrounding are considerably worked up over the movements of the daring revolutionists. The failure of the Mexican government to effect his capture or drive him from the country has given rise to the belief that he is stronger with the people than was formerly credited. The fact that Garza has respected private property has invested his undertaking with a respectability and dignity which a policy of pillage and robbery would have destroyed. Either President Diaz has had the talents and influence of Garza underrated him, or has greater confidence in the stability of the government than is enjoyed by many of the inhabitants of the northern frontier, or he would take more vigorous steps to suppress the incipient revolution.

That there is much dissatisfaction among the people against the heads of several of the state governments, notably that of Coahuila, if common reports be true, there is no doubt, and the central government is held responsible for this state of affairs and the people are anxious to have reform carried on in their local government.

The feeling is not against President Diaz personally as it is against the state officials who, in many instances it is claimed, are tyrannical and oppressive toward the people.

The laboring classes are burdened with so many taxes that as they become educated they are beginning to reason and think for themselves and to struggle to get out from under the load.

The governing classes have not appeared to realize the change which the enlightening influences of the railways have effected in the last ten years and the change which the sentiment of the people have undergone in consequence. The demand for a more equitable distribution of the burden of government is beginning to be heard, and the voice of any people just beginning to taste the sweets of liberty is dangerous to ignore.

President Diaz' name will go down in history as one of the most progressive and enlightened of Mexican statesmen, but having by his wonderful talents opened the eyes of his people to the blessings which progress and enlightenment brings, and having given to them the fruit of the tree of knowledge and taught them the value of liberty and good government, it would be a dangerous experiment to deny them their advantages.

If, as charged, the Mexican people are incapable of self-government, the lesson in republican ideas of liberty which has been taught them for the last few years will prove dangerous to the peace of the country. Reforms will be attempted, and it will be a blessing to the people if those in power are wise enough to see the drift of public sentiment and grant peacefully that which otherwise must come ultimately by force.

Garza individually is comparatively unknown and personally has but few adherents, but the principles of equal taxation, just laws, a free press and a free ballot and a government less centralized in its form are becoming dangerously popular, and his advocacy of these reforms has earned for him a certain amount of respect, which may increase at an alarming rate if left unchecked and unheeded.

in vain and always venerated, is becoming stronger in the affections of the people as they witness the blessings which she bestows upon her northern neighbor, and any leader, be his name Garza or what not, who hoists her banner will find followers ready to go to their deaths in her sacred cause. Reforms in the state governments, exemption from the oppressions and tyrannies of local officials and lessening of the burden of taxation upon the poorer people may avert the disasters which are sure to come sooner or later if the wishes of the people are disregarded. Mexico of today, with its railway and telegraph lines penetrating every portion of republic, is not the Mexico of ten years ago, and her rulers must, if the country stays at peace, realize the change and shape their policy in accordance with the times.

Hidalgo was the father of the republic, Janvez the liberator of the people from the oppressions of the church. Diaz has been down the barriers of trade and opened the way to commercial greatness.

The apostle of the great and grand Democratic principle of a government by the people is yet to come. If the rulers are wise he will come wearing the wreath of peace. If blind to the changes which are taking place, liberty will again teach the lesson which all history has received, that her blessings must be bought with human blood.

A Treasurer Short.

DES MOINES, Jan. 9.—R. W. Lane eight years treasurer of Oppanoose county, has disappeared, with a shortage of $12,000. He is also short $1,000 as administrator of the estate of Geo. Robinson. The day of his disappearance he was seen to have a big roll of bills, and his friends claim foul play.

He has considerable property which has been attached.

Stage Robbed.

STOCKTON, Cal., Jan. 9.—A passenger on a stage from San Andreas reports the stage running between Makolunne Hill and Valley Springs was stopped by a lone highwayman at the point about three miles from Makolunne yesterday. The driver said the robber had a shotgun and made him throw out the express bag and also empty his pockets.

Big Fire Near Montreal.

MONTREAL, Jan. 9.—Fire almost destroyed the town of Lachute, a thriving manufacturing center sixty miles from this city. Three hundred houses out of 400 were destroyed, and three-fourths of the inhabitants are seeking shelter in churches and public buildings which have withstood the flames. Loss, $200,000.

IN IT FOR SPOILS.

A Coterie of Politicians in Private Conference.

PLEDGE THE NOMINATION TO HILL.

The Boys in the Trenches of Course Have Nothing to say for They are Not Expected to Want any Offices —To this Complexion has it Come.

Special to The News.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The spoils-men are getting in their work early, as will be seen by noting personnel in the Washington special to the Sun, Jan. 8, which says that "a distinguished party of Democrats arrived from Philadelphia last evening. In the party were Ex Senator, William A. Wallace, Congressman Mutchler, Ekley B. Scott, J. M. Guffray, State Chairman Kerr and other prominent leaders. Each represented a distinct and personal following and extensive financial resources. Pennsylvania was joined here by a party of leaders from New York, Ohio, Indiana and other western and southern states. All united in a long and private conference at Willard's hotel. Before the conference broke up, it was pledged to aid in making Hill the party candidate.

The determination seems to be to force Hill upon the Democratic party in spite of his unpopularity among the people.
